

Peabody Museum Director David Skelly cordially invites you to the opening of

INVISIBLE BOUNDARIES

Exploring Yellowstone's Great Animal Migrations

Thursday, September 14, 2017

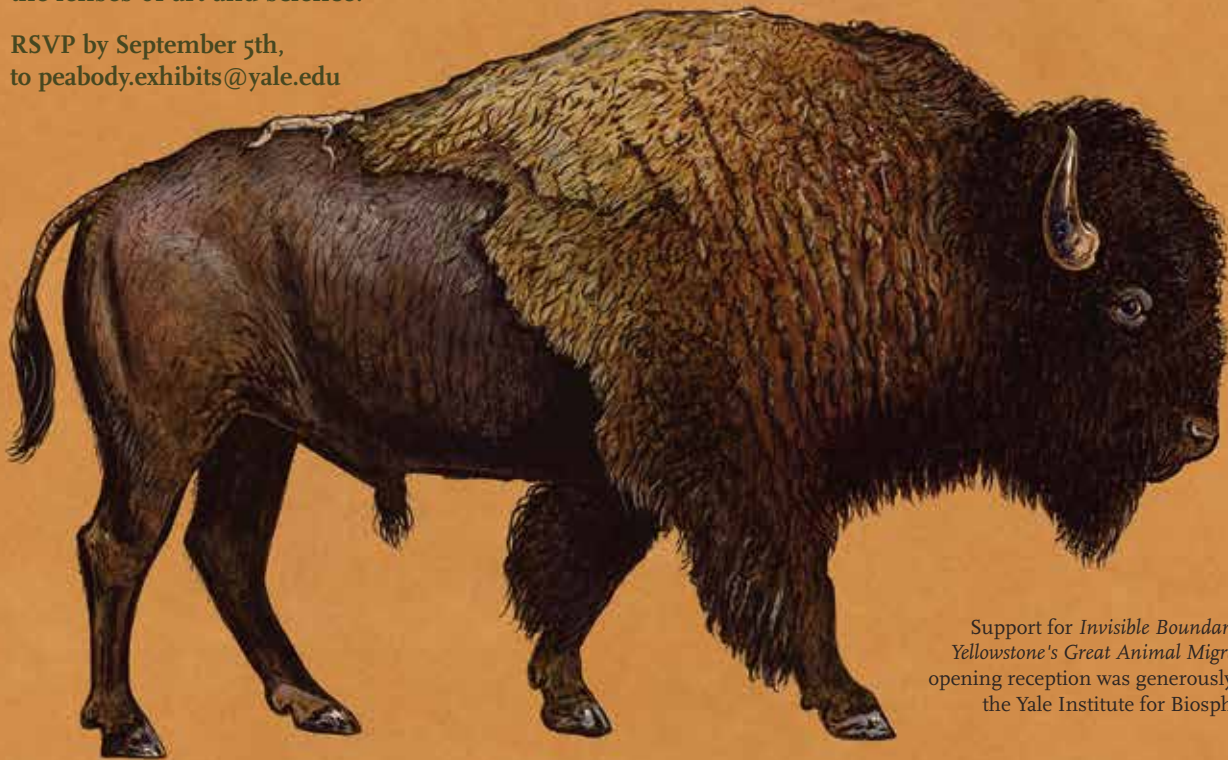

5:00–7:00 pm Exhibition Opening & Reception

7:15 pm Dinner in David Friend Hall

It is widely assumed that Yellowstone National Park is a sanctuary that protects animals within park boundaries from human impacts. But to the animals, the boundaries of Yellowstone are invisible as they migrate beyond the park's borders to secure the resources necessary for survival.

Please join us for an exclusive evening as we explore Yellowstone, conservation, and nature's fluidity through the lenses of art and science.

RSVP by September 5th,
to peabody.exhibits@yale.edu

Support for Invisible Boundaries: Exploring Yellowstone's Great Animal Migrations and its opening reception was generously provided by the Yale Institute for Biospheric Studies.

YALE PEABODY MUSEUM 170 Whitney Avenue, New Haven, CT

James Prosek. American Bison, 2014. Watercolor, gouache, and colored pencil on tea-stained paper, 24 ¼ x 28 ½ in. Buffalo Bill Center of the West, Cody, Wyoming. William E. Weiss Memorial Fund Purchase. 3.16.2
Image Courtesy of the artist and Schwartz - Wajahat, New York.